"Homes of a Hundred Ideas."

A Widespread Interest Aroused in Home Ideals.

Where is the woman who would not love every feature we have incorporated in our new homes? Women's ideals-women's suggestions to save steps-to lighten work-to render the home a model of comfort and convenience. We marvel at the lack of insight with which men have planned houses from time immemorial. It is wonderful, however, how quickly Americans learn when once their attention has been called to a thing. Already houses are being viewed critically. What is it they lack that makes up a real home? The first visit to our homes will reveal the principal features that distinguish a house from a home. Every woman knows what they are.

It is the men who have not thought that things might be different. There is not a man in the radius of this city who will raise a question about our homes, ideals and terms. Is there a man so unimpressionable that he will not see the advantage of them? We realize that men have been building houses, but other men have also been paying Our purchase plan offers the home buyer an opportunity for larger profits, coupled with absolute security that cannot be had in any other legitimate way. Will you not now turn your rent money over thoughtfully this month? The waiting for the announcement of the location of our homes is attended with some anticipation. Shannon & Luchs (Selling Agents), 713
